Air Force Reserve Vision

-Lt Gen John Bradley

As we move into 2006, it is clear that we need to remain adaptable and innovative as we reconcile the significant manpower reductions, budget constraints and considerable force structure changes that lie ahead. We are being challenged with tough choices as bases and wings close or reorganize, but I'm confident we will emerge more efficient and capable than ever. A key part of our decision-making strategy is to ensure everyone has a clear vision for the future of the Air Force Reserve.

Our mission in this rapidly changing environment is to provide the world's best mutual support to the Air Force and our joint partners. To this end, we are introducing the Air Force Reserve Vision with a focus on the wingman concept. You can expect to hear more about the Vision and our future goals following the Senior Leaders Conference in February. Being a good wingman is not an easy job! We will maintain the highest levels of combat readiness and be prepared to not only maintain good formation, but also take the lead as necessary. We must anticipate evolving requirements and quickly adapt to meet those demands. The best wingmen look for optimal ways to employ our force and advocate processes and improvements that make everyone more effective. We are diligent and always alert, ready to warn others of impending peril. Great wingmen are never expected to blindly follow or be viewed as the "B-team". Our role is not to be #2 but to be the steadfast wingman, efficiently delivering highly experienced personnel, modern equipment and incomparable combat capability to combatant commanders.

The Vision, along with the documents and associated products, is intended to help everyone in the Air Force Reserve make cohesive decisions that focus our resources on our highest priorities while maintaining the key attributes that ensure our component's continued success. I ask for your complete support as we work together to build a stronger, more agile Air Force. As you continue to seek innovative ways to be more effective and responsive wingmen, I am confident our heritage will extend its acclaim as a vital contributor to the Air Force and the defense of this nation.

Thank you for your continued support and for your part in making the Air Force Reserve the Unrivaled Wingman!

Future Total Force to Total Force Integration

Much has happened since the original Future Total Force effort got off the ground; the BRAC and QDR processes have had a significant impact on how we are shaping our force and how we realize our integration goals.

Secretary Wynne recently stated, "The Total Force is now." His vision confirms that the Regular Air Force, Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve are moving together into the future ... quickly. Integration of all components will continue to leverage the strengths inherent in each and will be a critical enabler as we meet current and future threats.

In keeping with the Secretary's vision, the previous FTF office is now the "Total Force Integration" directorate. This name change will in no way alter the mission, functions or responsibilities. The mission remains to fully leverage the potential of greater integration of the Regular Air Force, Air National Guard and Air Force Reserve to help create a smaller, more efficient and more lethal Air Force. The new name does more accurately reflect the office's mission and recognizes that we are now and have been a Total Force.

The future is now.
